Horizontal and Vertical Ridge Augmentation using GBR and Soft Tissue Grafts - Esthetic, Implant and Restorative Benefits and Limits

5 CEUs • 9:00am-4:00pm • Dr. Sascha Jovanovic

For over 25 years Guided Bone Regeneration (GBR) has changed and innovated surgical implant placement and allowed predictable bone regeneration for long term implant, prosthetic, and esthetic results. This course will cover the biological principles and the attention to detail necessary for the three main GBR indications—narrow, knife-edge and vertically deficient ridges. Additionally, the procedures necessary to address the soft tissue deficiencies and severe mucogingival problems that precede or follow GBR treatment will be addressed. The protocols used for bone grafts, membranes, tacking systems, growth factors, and soft tissue grafts including biomaterials, instruments, and clinical steps will be covered. The course will also cover early and late clinical complications that can affect the outcomes and esthetics of the above procedures.

The learning objectives of this course are:

- to be able to understand the biological principles and clinical steps in various GBR techniques
- to choose the correct GBR clinical protocol and understand its outcome
- to prevent and treat complications of GBR procedures
