Implant Interactions with Orthodontics

The advent and success of implantology continues to transform dentistry, and the inclusion of implants as integral components in orthodontic mechanotherapy is a particularly interesting application. Much more than setting up cases to receive implants for tooth replacement, orthodontic techniques that actually employ implants for the purpose of anchorage has a dramatic effect on previously unattainable possibilities and outcomes. Implant-enhanced orthodontics can be achieved by a variety of means. Interdisciplinary treatment planning will be the topic of discussion throughout the day.

Course Objectives:

Upon completion of this curriculum, the participants should be able to:

1. Appreciate the application of implant technology to orthodontic therapy
2. Benefits and contraindications for use of implants in orthodontic treatments
3. Understand the advantages and utilization of direct and indirect anchorage
4. Decision points will be discussed for determining the proper time to open or close spaces related to implant restorative options
5. Interdisciplinary treatment planning techniques for developing and executing on best treatment options for complex patients
